The Body Project is a large study of attitudes towards sex and gender in eating disorders (EDs) and their mothers. At intake, 37 of the 363 participants were found to have a problem meeting at least one of the sex-disordered body attitudes, with rates of 0.5% to 66% in different diagnostic subgroups. At discharge, 66% met criteria for at least one disorder and 24% had improved their body image to a nontoxic level in the last 6 months of treatment. In this article, the most common sex-disordered body attitudes and their relationships with therapy outcome are examined in this longitudinal study. The rate of sex-disordered body attitudes in the ED group was high, with notable differences by diagnosis and treatment setting. All female patients with eating disorders had sex-disordered attitudes, usually related to the way the body was perceived in contrast to an ideal and usually characterised by body dissatisfaction and/or sexual dissatisfaction. The rate of such attitudes was higher than in the general population and increased throughout treatment. Furthermore, the link between attitudes and therapy outcome was also examined, and the domains most strongly linked to improvement during treatment were alcohol-related attitudes and eating-attitudes. It seems that full recovery in ED treatment is not possible without resolving such attitudes.Awards and decorations of the Italian Air Force This is a list of awards and decorations of the Italian Air Force, composed of Air Force Service Medals, Air Force Decorations, and various other decorations, rank insign 09e8f5149f
